Course Description: This course explores the constitutional law of civil liberties and civil rights in depth. We will trace the development of our civil liberties and civil rights along with the application and modification of it through precedent or political or societal changes. This course seeks to understand the legal context of civil rights and liberties issues to allow for more informed conversations, recognize the history and current legal state of these issues, and attempt to predict future legal outcomes. Ultimately, this course is not about mere recitation of facts or personal opinions, but about developing a new approach to identifying and solving problems.

Learning Objectives:

- Develop a substantive understanding of historical and modern developments in the constitutional law of civil rights and civil liberties.
- Develop a substantive understanding of the political and societal processes that interact with law to shape the decision-making environment in which U.S. Supreme Court justices decide constitutional issues regarding civil rights and civil liberties.
- Apply these substantive understandings to current issues and hypothetical problems so as to predict future legal outcomes.
- Build skills in reading and effectively summarizing constitutional law.
- Develop a firm grasp and command of how to convey in writing sophisticated analytic arguments related to civil liberties and civil rights.
- Be able to critically think about the law and to synthesize and apply legal principles.

Policies:
Please review the GMU website for information on academic policies. Some items:

Late Assignments: You may turn in an assignment up to one week late. You will be deducted ten points a day, for a maximum of 70 points. No assignments will be accepted after a week unless prior arrangements were made due to mitigating circumstances.

Attendance Policy: Students are strongly encouraged to attend every class and their grade will be negatively impacted if they miss too many classes. Please make every effort to get to class on time and please notify the instructor if you will have to leave early. If you must arrive late or depart early, please take a seat in a location where your arrival or departure will not disrupt ongoing class activities. Students who miss class or any part thereof are responsible for all materials covered during that class and are expected to work with classmates to ensure they know what they missed. Please contact the instructor if medical difficulties or a personal crisis prohibits you from attending class.

Honor Code: Established rules per the GMU honor code covering plagiarism and academic honesty must be followed at all times. In this class, all written assignments, including examinations, must be completed individually. Web postings, reports, and examinations are to be the sole products of the individual whose name is on them. Collaborations on written assignments and exams are not permitted. Any confirmed violations of this rule will result in a grade of “F” for the assignment in question and may be turned over to Honor Committee for additional action.

Important Dates: Please review the GMU website for important dates for the semester, such as the drop/add deadline.
Course Schedule:

*All readings are expected to be completed prior to class. During class, we may deviate from readings—some weeks we will discuss material after reading and some prior.
