Course Description
This course serves as an advanced examination of American government and politics. Obviously it is impossible to cover the entire field in a single semester, so we have to make some choices. We will cover the major topics in American government/politics with an effort to provide an array of research approaches and significant themes.

This class will be run as a reading seminar. The reading load is moderately heavy, and you are expected to do the weekly readings. Indeed you must do the assigned readings before class each week. You should be able to discuss and analyze the literature.

Course Requirements:

- You will be responsible for five short papers. The papers should be a critical review of one of the assigned books/papers for that topic—2 to 3 pages. You must submit your paper no later than the evening of that topic’s discussion.
- There will be a final exam (take-home) for this course.
- Each student will also prepare an end of term paper, that clearly states a research question to be answered, accompanied by a literature review that supports the importance of the question. Finally, the paper must contain a description of the process and methods that the student would use to answer the question.
- Finally, because this is a reading seminar, you will be graded on your participation in class discussion. Emphasis will be placed on the quality of this participation and the extent to which participation demonstrates a command of the literature.

Grades
Participation 10%
Short topic papers 15%
Paper 30
Final Exam 40%

Academic Integrity
The integrity of the University community is affected by the individual choices made by each of us. GMU has an Honor Code with clear guidelines regarding academic integrity. Three fundamental and rather simple principles to follow at all times are that: (1) all work submitted be your own; (2) when using the work or ideas of others, including fellow students, give full credit through accurate citations; and (3) if you are uncertain about the ground rules on a particular assignment, ask for clarification. No grade is important enough to justify academic misconduct. Plagiarism means using the exact words, opinions, or factual information from another person without giving the person credit. Writers give credit through accepted documentation styles, such as parenthetical citation, footnotes, or endnotes. Paraphrased material must also be cited, using MLA or APA format. A simple listing of books or articles is not sufficient. Plagiarism is the equivalent of intellectual robbery and cannot be tolerated in the academic setting. If you have any doubts about what constitutes plagiarism, please see me.

Disability Accommodations

If you have a documented learning disability or other condition that may affect academic performance you should: 1) make sure this documentation is on file with Office of Disability Services (SUB I, Rm. 4205; 993-2474:http://ods.gmu.edu) to determine the accommodations you need; and 2) talk with me to discuss your accommodation needs.
